24	MR. SHORTNANCY: Sure. Good morning, Your Honor, good
25	to see you. Michael Shortnancy from Shook Hardy on behalf of the Uber Defendants.

I have a number of colleagues on with me who will speak depending on the topic including Alycia Degen, Chris Cotton, Veronica Gromada and Jeremy Wikler.

THE COURT: Okay. Good morning.

MR. SHORTNANCY: Good morning.

THE COURT: Okay. So, thank you for the joint status report that you-all filed in advance of today's discovery status conference. We don't have a lot of time this morning, so I'm going to walk through this as quickly as possible, the various issues that were addressed; and I want to also touch on the depositions for the current Uber CEO as well as the former one, Travis Kalanick, just briefly at the end regarding logistics.

So, focusing in on this report, there are some issues related to 30(b)(6) depositions, and Plaintiffs had proposed a May 2nd deadline to attempt to reach an agreement and a May 5th deadline to raise disputes if they are not resolved.

I think that just given the tight timeline that we have to get all of this done, it does make sense for the Court to impose those deadlines to keep the process moving.

So, I -- I hope that you-all can resolve this by May 2nd.

If -- if Uber wants to be heard on that deadline and a May 5th deadline to submit briefing on this, you can propose some alternate timeframe right now; but those deadlines seem reasonable to me as opposed to Uber's proposal that no deadlines be set at all.

MS. DEGEN: Good morning, Your Honor, this is Alycia

Degen with Shook Hardy for the Uber Defendants. We would like to be heard briefly on the timing of resolving the disputes and getting a submission to the Court and some suggestions on how we might do that sort of submission most efficiently.

I would suggest if we can -- so, I think May 2nd is next Friday. May 5th is next Monday. Knowing the coordination that needs to happen on these issues, I would suggest that we move the time to finish our meet-and-confer to early the week of the 5th with a submission later that week; and I think that will be important because I just -- as I walked in or turned on my computer this morning, we had suggested last Friday a series of dates to Plaintiffs on topics that overlap with depositions that are moving forward in the JCCP including dates coming up relatively quickly.

And I saw for the first time this morning that Plaintiffs do not want those dates and want to -- looks like reschedule them. It is not clear to me at this point whether the rescheduling is just for the MDL or for the JCCP as well, but I think we are going to need a little bit of time to herd the cats and get this done in a way that's going to make sense because, you know, there is a lot to be done in both jurisdictions; and I think we can get these done in a coordinated fashion relatively directly.

With respect to how we would provide the submission, I'm familiar with the PTO 8 process. I also know there's a lot -- there can be a lot of back-and-forth that takes up time.

Our thought was if we are going to need to submit something to the Court, that the parties exchange a list of the topics that they think are at issue. We each write up our -- set a time for that exchange, set a time to exchange our positions. Defendants will be happy to combine all of that into a single document to the Court, but I don't think this is something we are going to need to have a lot of -- you know, back-and-forth in a written submission over the course of a week. We should all just get our positions down on paper and, you know, get them to the Court in a single document.

(Pause in proceedings.)

THE COURT: Why -- sorry, why doesn't the PTO process that is currently in place not work for that?

MS. DEGEN: So, Your Honor, I think it is more a question of -- the PTO 8 process, effectively if we were going to be submitting a -- disputes to the Court -- if we are supposed to meet and confer through next Friday and then submit disputes to the Court on Monday, we effectively have to start drafting now. And I think the parties -- we all just need to get -- to sit down and work through this a bit more.

So, I think in this one circumstance something a little more direct that doesn't take a week -- or a week-and-a-half of back and forth on what we are going to say on paper, let us focus on what we actually need to get done; see what we can work out, and then this should be a -- you know, this topic, you know, Plaintiffs, Defendants; this topic, Plaintiffs Defendants. So, we do it pretty quickly.

THE COURT: Okay. Do Plaintiffs want to respond to either the timing or this formatting proposal?

MS. LUHANA: Yes, Your Honor, Roopal Luhana for the Plaintiffs. Judge, just to give you some background, we had served these 30(b)(6) notices on Defendants March 19th and March 21st. We received dates for depositions on April 18th, and those were dates that were negotiated with the JCCP, and they have provided dates all in the beginning of May with three depositions on the same date. They are unworkable only for the MDL. We are not representing the JCCP Plaintiffs, of course.

And so, we believe in light of what's outstanding, we have 18 more depositions to handle. We have eight more 30(b)(6)s to do. We just need to move this process along in terms of the timeline.

I think next week is sufficient to meet and confer, as we had suggested, to be resolving these issues by May 2nd to file something on May 5th; and we think the PTO process thus far has worked well, and I think will work in this circumstance.

MS. DEGEN: May I respond, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Sure.

MS. DEGEN: Thank you. They served 162 30(b)(6) topics. A lot of those overlap with topics that are moving forward in the JCCP. We have had lawyers who participate in both the JCCP and the MDL involved in the meet-and-confers and the coordination. In fact, we have a gentleman who is -- you know, his job in this is to coordinate amongst the two jurisdictions.

If we -- we need to be speaking with MDL and JCCP Counsel right away to get these issues figured out. In fact, some of the deposition dates -- you know, they are not following through on placeholder dates that have been -- that we have been holding for guite some time. So --

THE COURT: All right. Let's do this. Finish your meet-and-confer effort by Friday, May 2nd; and then submit the dispute by May 8th to the Court if you haven't resolved it entirely or if there is some remaining disputes that I need to address; but May 2nd is the deadline for the meet-and-confer process and then the submission will be by May 8th.

In terms of the page limits and the like, PTO 8 sets the default; but if the parties stipulate to some other format that doesn't give me more than ten pages to read as a letter, that will be fine with me. Given the number of topics that have been noticed, you-all may need some more pages.

So, all right. So let's move on. Clawback procedures.

So, I -- when I looked at this issue, I tend to agree with Uber that -- to the extent that these clawback disputes are privilege disputes, then they ought to be addressed by Special Master Judge Barbara Jones.

However, I have a problem with allowing clawback notices concerning documents that were de-designated over the course of the fall months, winter when -- before Judge Jones was appointed as Special Master; and when I was overseeing a -- you know, tranches of privilege log disputes, and I specifically ordered in multiple orders -- in October, November, December -- Uber to rereview and de-designate based on what my rulings had been.

So, essentially if I allow Uber to serve clawback notices as to documents that were de-designated during that process after they had been posted on a privilege log that was then re-reviewed, then we are seriously turning this into a merry-go-round process.

And so, I consider those de-designation decisions to be waiver of -- of the privilege assertion. So, those -- I don't know how many -- I think the status report referenced 30. It may not be a lot that are at issue in that regard, but at least to cabin this process so that it's focused on documents that were not previously on the privilege log that Uber may view that it inadvertently disclosed them as part of the discovery process, then those seem to me fair game for a clawback notice unless there is something that Judge Jones has done in her -in her handling of the privilege logs dispute. I will leave that to her.

But at least for the time period in which privilege assertions were withdrawn, documents were de-designated and taken off the privilege log while I was handling the privilege log process and ordering rereviews on multiple occasions, then those privilege assertions are waived and they should not be part of clawback -- new clawback notices and disputes that are submitted to Judge Jones.

MS. LUHANA: Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. SHORTNANCY: May I speak to that, Your Honor? This is Michael Shortnancy speaking for the Uber Defendants.

> THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SHORTNANCY: I hear what you are saying, Judge. Ι absolutely understand that. Let me offer some additional, I think, color. When we were in the process before Your Honor for the privilege log challenges, there were a number of documents that we reviewed on very tight timelines. I don't have the exact dates in front of me; but as Your Honor was entering orders, we were directed to go back -- and we did go back -- to re-review documents on the log to apply lessons Plaintiffs also were ordered to apply lessons learned to their challenges but -- the parties did that.

Uber was required to do that in very compressed

And so, to the extent a document may have been timeframes. de-designated -- and there are very few of them. So, we are talking about 30 at this point, give or take -- but in the rare instance that I think some of those documents may have come off of the privilege logs or assertions of privilege over them -over the passage of time and with rulings subsequent by Your Honor and by Judge Jones and as we learn additional information that may not have been apparent at the time we were working under those deadlines to apply the Court's lessons learned -- there may be cases where we believe a clawback is appropriate and supportable.

And so, I would just urge Your Honor -- you know, the attorney-client privilege is a very important privilege. I would urge the Court to consider not imposing a blanket waiver in that -- and permitting because the circumstances are quite few. We are not trying to redo or get everybody back on the merry-go-round. We are very sincerely asserting what we believe is a privilege that we have a foundation to assert in a rare instance in these cases where information may have become apparent later through the course of our discovery and investigation about, perhaps, the -- that a lawyer who was not apparent on the face of the document actually asked the business person to prepare the presentation or something like that, to use a hypothetical, those are the instances where we would be asserting a clawback.

I would respectfully request that the Court permit the parties to bring that to Judge Jones. It is not something that we have, you know, used in bad faith to encourage a merry-go-round and let Judge Jones decide; was that a waiver, was it not. Was that part of lessons learned or was it not. It is such a small number of documents, Judge, and the privilege is so important that I think that it militates in favor in this case allowing Judge Jones to be sort of the arbiter of that decision.

THE COURT: I'm not inclined to do that. To me it sounds like a motion for reconsideration based on newly discovered evidence, so it would be submitted to me since I made the decision. And for Judge Jones it was, you know, would be within her purview to address new privilege log disputes that couldn't have been raised in front of me. And I think it's a bad -- if I went in that direction that you are proposing, it sets up, I think, a -- some real procedural problems in the way it incentivizes parties to maybe not do a thorough review in the first instance; and really, the re-review process was a second opportunity for Uber to do the due diligence that it needed to do to appropriately assert attorney-client privilege and any other privilege that may -or protection that might have been applicable.

So, I was serious about the re-review process. timeframes for what they were -- if there was concern that there were individuals that you were not able to talk to and that you needed to, you know, follow-up with for a certain subset of documents, that could have been raised at that time.

And so, I think also what -- I'm thinking about too is the extent to which there was broad de-designations of thousands of documents that were then -- where the assertions were then withdrawn. And so, that to me -- struck me as substantial over-designation. And so, you know, that's just also why I'm skeptical of any further efforts to turn this process into another trip around a carousel. It felt like we already took one trip around the merry-go-round.

MR. SHORTNANCY: Your Honor --

THE COURT: And -- go ahead, sir.

MR. SHORTNANCY: Sorry, I didn't want to interrupt,

Judge. Are you --

THE COURT: No. I'm done. What did you want to --

MR. SHORTNANCY: Thank you. I would just clarify a couple of points. I mean, we are not suggesting that we take a document the Court has specifically ruled on and redoing that document. I think that is a fair point, Judge.

I think what we are suggesting is that in a situation where you have many thousands of documents and many thousands of privilege log entries where we were asked to have lawyers sitting in -- you know, in a room apply the Court's thinking and reasoning on one document that was ruled on and applying it to a larger set of documents, that is the situation I think that we are talking about.

THE COURT: It is a larger set of documents that were already on privilege logs that had already been served to the Plaintiffs that were already part of the process of involving a series of tranches of documents that were sampled. And so, that's a process that I instituted and oversaw and utilized everyone's time and resources as we focused in on that.

And so, I'm not going to have that process redone. if I didn't adjudicate a particular document, it still feels like we are going back to that prior corpus of -- of ESI or documents that we worked through over the fall. And it seems inefficient and inconsistent. And then if I'm willing to re-open the process, then that undercuts the Court's efforts to do things as efficiently as possible and also not reintroduce a whole new set of privilege disputes for Judge Jones that we at least -- were a portion of.

So, I don't think that it's a good use of my discretion and oversight of the process to re-open that. I think, you know, obviously attorney-client privilege and other privileges are, you know, incredibly, exceptionally important and foundational to how litigation happens and how people and companies seek representation. And that's why at the outset, that attention and care needs to be taken to get -- make the right calls. And essentially Uber -- for the body of documents that we worked through, Uber had two opportunities. So, that's 1 where -- how I'm handling this. 2 MS. LUHANA: Your Honor, can I say one thing? 3 THE COURT: Well, we don't have a lot of time today 4 5 because I have also got --6 MS. LUHANA: It's just -- sorry. It is just a quick 7 request. We just had requested that we submit the dispute to Judge Jones by April 28th because these clawbacks were 8 happening on the eve of depositions during depositions, so the 9 process just needs to be addressed. So, we want to submit our 10 11 dispute. And so, we just wanted to ensure that --THE COURT: I'm not going to control the timeline for 12 when she handles these disputes. I don't know how she is going 13 to want them worked up or what timeframe that would be. So, I 14 15 would leave that to the parties to, you know, meet and confer 16 and to propose to her a timeframe and she can respond to that 17 how she sees fit. 18 MS. LUHANA: Understood, Your Honor. MR. SHORTNANCY: Judge, just so you know, the parties 19 20 met ex parte separately with the Special Master yesterday to 21 discuss gaming out a plan for this, just so you are aware. THE COURT: Okay. All right. Thank you. 22 23 All right. Safety data. Okay. So, the interrogatory request looks pretty straightforward. To the extent that Plaintiffs are asking for the number of sexual violent incidents for each month in each category, those terms say "incidents" not "reports." It sounds like there is a lot of -there was meet-and-confers on this. Obviously it's possible that there is more to the story as far as what Uber agreed to,

and I don't have a record of that. This dispute is not briefed or explained beyond what I have in the status report, but it just seems like if it is -- it says "incidents," not "reports."

So, to the extent Uber may need to de-duplicate the data so that it reflects incidents rather than reports, then -- you know, per month and per category, then that would be Uber's burden to do that.

I will give you-all another week to meet and confer on this. And if you don't have it fully resolved, you can submit it through a PTO 8 letter to me a week from today.

MR. WIKLER: Your Honor, Jeremy Wikler, if I may, that's what Uber provided is the number of incidents classified by each category by month for 2017 to 2022.

(Pause in proceedings.)

THE COURT: Plaintiffs.

MS. WILKINS: Your Honor, Beth Wilkins for the Plaintiffs. I'm happy to respond to that. Appreciate the deadlines for filing a PTO 8 letter. I think that makes sense. From the Plaintiffs' perspective, despite what Mr. Wikler just represented, there is still a dispute that remains. What Uber provided to the Plaintiffs includes duplication in potentially every category and every data point from January 1st, 2017, all the way through December of 2022.

They have identified that each month in each of the 23 categories that were produced is essentially unreliable because we don't know how much duplication is in each category.

I'm glad to continue to meet and confer on that and file a PTO 8 letter if we can't reach resolution, but the bottom line is what Plaintiffs need is whatever Uber's witnesses intend to rely on without being surprised when we see it in an expert report or somewhere later on. So, if they are going to use de-duplicated data at some point in this litigation, then we need to know what their numbers are.

Then it seems like to some extent THE COURT: Okay. Uber's position in the status report is that Plaintiffs have raw data. And so, therefore, they should just look at and analyze the raw data; but I think Plaintiffs are entitled to serve interrogatories to ask, you know, additional questions that are relevant to the case, and those questions may be about data that -- or analyses that Uber is relying on or uses apart from what's in the safety report or what's in the data that was provided in the safety report.

So, to the extent Uber's position is, Well, you know, they will have everything and there is nothing -- based on that raw data and nothing further is discoverable, I just don't foresee that Rule 26 applying in that way but --

Your Honor, it is Michael Shortnancy, MR. SHORTNANCY: if I may speak to that. The chief data scientist is being deposed about a hundred yards from me right now, the person who prepared this data, the person who certified this data. I believe, although I'm obviously not in that room right now, that there is participation by the MDL Plaintiffs in the deposition by agreement to minimize duplicative questions that may arise in what is set to be a deposition of the same data scientist tomorrow on these topics. So, I think that this is being presented to the Court as somewhat of a manufactured dispute. We have provided information to Plaintiffs. We have provided in numerous forms at the Plaintiffs' request. We provided unique counts at the Plaintiffs' request. We are not saying that the data is unreliable. We are saying what we have always said to the Court and in the safety reports; that when you are outside of the five most serious categories of the taxonomy, which go through the audit process and the safety reporting process, some of the -- the 16 through 21 can be categorized in multiple categories because they may be subjective.

And so, when they are not sort of adjudicated or firmly decided or audited to be in one category, they are going to be in multiple; and that's why we are saying -- we have explained this to Counsel multiple times -- that that's the way the data dispute and --

              THE COURT:
                          Yeah.
 3
              MR. SHORTNANCY: -- there is no --
 4
 5
              THE COURT:
                          I'm not going to decide it today.
                                                             So,
     there will be a letter where you can provide this more fulsome 6
     explanation and record there. And I will carefully review it.
 7
          Okay. All right. So, moving on, we have got the TAR
 8
             It doesn't seem like there is an active dispute here 9
     update.
10 that needs to be addressed, and we really don't have time to 11 talk about anything that's unnecessary for discussion today.
          So, the bellwether -- I'm going to move on to the next 12
           The bellwether deposition -- Plaintiffs' depositions, 13
     I'm going to hold off on resolving this until I have a clear 14
15
     understanding with what -- of what Judge Breyer is going to do 16 with the bellwether waves and staggering discovery by 17 bellwether waves. So -- so, that's how I'm going to approach 18
            I think that should be resolved soon given that you-all 19 briefed it and submitted it to him, you know, just a short 20 while ago; but the parties should be prepared to conduct the 21
     Wave 1 depositions very, very quickly.
          I think at different times Plaintiffs have said that this 22
     is like exceptionally challenging, but there are a lot of 23 different firms involved in this litigation. So, I imagine 24

that the leads will allocate the work so it can be handled

25

So, all right.

MS. ABRAMS: Thank you, Your Honor, Rachel Abrams for the Plaintiffs. And we have provided deposition dates for all of the proposed bellwether in Wave 1 and most of them in 2 already.

THE COURT: Okay, all right. So, let's move on to the next item, release authorizations. And this does not sound like a dispute that's ripe just yet.

So, now moving on to the Plaintiffs' responses to discovery request, it seems like this is a dispute about delinquencies in the Plaintiff fact sheets and that Uber is looking for a more -- a streamline process than what PTO 10 provides for, for raising deficiencies.

You know, I'm reluctant at this point to diverge from that process; but if there are particular Plaintiffs' firms or lawyers that are using that process essentially to get de facto extensions and to consistently avoiding Plaintiff fact sheets when they are actually due, then, you know, that's disregarding a discovery order and that's opening yourself up to potential sanctions.

So, I don't know exactly what is going on here but that's my reaction on the record. So, you know.

MS. ABRAMS: Thank you, Your Honor, this is Rachel Abrams for the Plaintiffs again. Just so you know, we as well

were unaware of this -- this issue, and this is the first time 1 in the JSR that we saw this; and we have not been advised of 2
     the firms, the cases that are allegedly deficient for PFSs.
 3
     So, we are very much willing to work with Uber and their
 5
     Counsel on rectifying these. We were just unaware of it and 6 typically, as we have done in the past, we have seen the PTO 8 briefs on this failure to provide PFSs. So, again we were as 7 surprised as you were.
 8
              THE COURT: Okay. Well, now that you.
 9
              MS. FRAIZER: If I may, Kat Frazier for the Uber
10
11
     Defendants. We just raised this here because it is an ongoing issue, and we wanted to raise to Your Honor's awareness that we 12 were just thinking about ways to potentially not change PTO 10 13 in any way but to increase the -- maybe the effectiveness and 14
15
     the efficiencies in resolving deficiencies.
16
          And so, we are absolutely willing to meet and confer with 17
     the Plaintiffs about how best to do that in a way that won't 18 further burden the Court and that will be something that we can 19
     all sort of agree on moving forward.
20
              THE COURT:
                          Okay.

Case 3:23-md-03084-CRB Document 3137-1 Filed 06/02/25 Page 23 of 26 Defendants and may be the best person if we have questions 1 2 about the Apex depositions. THE COURT: Oh, okay. So, let's bring her on because 3 I want to turn to that very quickly before we wrap up. 4 5 THE CLERK: Yes, Your Honor. THE COURT: Just to respond to Ms. Frazier, so now --6 it sounds like, according to Ms. Abrams, the lead Counsel on 7 Plaintiffs' side were unaware of this. Now, they are. And, 8 you know, that's one of the benefits of the joint status 9 reports is it helps to surface issues that the parties need to 10 11 address and to keep the process moving. So, you-all should address it and you have got my -- the 12 Plaintiffs' Counsel have my preliminary views on this. 13 14

So, you-all should address it and you have got my -- the Plaintiffs' Counsel have my preliminary views on this. I do -- you know, we need to make sure that the PFS process serves -- happens in a timely way, in a way that's consistent with PTO 10. And if not, it is disregard of the discovery order so that's very risky and creates exposures to sanctions.

So let's move on. I got the safety lens order out. I know there is an outstanding set of issues related to the bellwether depositions protocols. I will handle those shortly. But as far as the depositions for Khosrowshahi and for Mr. Kalanick, I don't think we set a start time; and I think the parties kindly start to planning late morning on the East Coast so that I could get on Zoom at an ordinary hour and monitor the depositions.

I'm willing to start as early as 8:00 in the morning or 7:30 in the morning to move the process along. And given that there is coordination for -- in depositions with JCCP Counsel, that may be necessary. So, we can talk about timing right now or you could e-mail my courtroom deputy after we wrap up today and let me know what time you think it would make sense to start and share with me -- to the extent you know today -- how you plan -- how you think this process will play out timing-wise and as far as coordination. MS. DAVIDSON: Your Honor, this is Jessica Davidson. 11

It is nice to meet you. I'm with the firm of Kirkland & Ellis. As you may have heard, we recently joined Uber's defense team. I'm the one who is tasked with making sure that all of your accessibility is perfect for those depositions. And so, if something goes wrong, if your real-time doesn't work, I'm the person to yell at.

> THE COURT: Thank you.

MS. DAVIDSON: I just want to make sure I understand one thing. When you say "8:00 a.m." -- obviously one deposition is going to be in California. One deposition is going to be in New York. I assume you mean 8:00 a.m. Pacific time.

THE COURT: Yes, Pacific time so that your 7:30 a.m. -- and I was specifically -- didn't want to delay the deponent, Mr. Khosrowshahi and all the Counsel on the East asking me to start earlier than you might have originally anticipated if that's going to be helpful for the process.

 5
              MS. DAVIDSON: That would be very, very helpful with respect to Dara's deposition in New York. If I may, I would 7 like to take you up on the offer that we follow up with an

              THE COURT:
                          Okay. Also, I will have my law clerk the back end with my courtroom deputy.

              MS. DAVIDSON: Will your law clerk be with you or separate?

16
              THE COURT: We will probably be on separate screens.
17
              MS. DAVIDSON: And do you want real-time for your law

                                 Why not? All right.
19
              THE COURT:
                          Sure.
20 anything else that we should discuss?
21
              MS. LUHANA: Nothing for the Plaintiffs, Your Honor.

              THE COURT:
                          Okay.
